

Numbers refer to negatives; prints numbered on back side.

1. Trondhjem. Taken from bridge over Nidelven. CIA-132767
2. Dampskip Nordstjernen at dock in Trondheim. Sign to the right sayd "Nordgaaende hurtigrute avgang kl 11:30 uvedkommende forbys adgang billeter maa løses i land." Note Dodge truck to the left. CIA-132768
3. Stern of D. S. Nordstjernen in Trondhjem. Man - unknown - is typical. So is his coat. CIA-132769
4. D. S. Nordstjernen in Tr. loading bananas. Among other things we took on deck were ca. 60 pigs, skinned but not butchered up. CIA-132770
5. Munkeholmen, about 15 minutes by ship outside of Tr. harbor; more recently a fort or fortification, I've heard. CIA-132771
6. Along Trondhjemsfjorden. NOT ACCESSIONED. POOR QUALITY.
7. Near the mouth of Trondhjemsfjorden. This picture set out to show the whole economy of north Norway - a few buildings on very little arable land, some trees higher up, and at sea, fishing. CIA-132772
8. Coastline just out of the fjord. CIA-132773
- 9) Dock at ørnes. CIA-132774
- 10) CIA-132775
11. Two girls I've been going with this winter; Belgian and French. Not accessioned. No intel. value.
12. Three other students: French-Moroccan, Yugoslavian, Polish-Israelian. "
- 13.) Two shots in the rain of the upper harbor at Bodø. CIA-132776
- 14.) CIA-132777
15. Boat out of Kabelvaag. Either a "second" boat for sweep-net fishing, or a snare-net fisher who overslept that morning. Not accessioned. Similarity in group.
16. Fishing fleet out of Kabelvaag, well spread out by now. CIA-132778
17. This and the next nine pictures taken from sweep-net fishing boat "Mascot" of Kabelvaag. Here they have hauled in the bottom and bow cables, and are taking up a bit of the net. In the water are the floats laid around the net. CIA-132779
18. This shows our partner boat (left) trying to hold us away from our open net. Notice the second line run midway from cable; varying tension on this helps maintain the correct position of the tug in relation to the net boat. CIA-132780
19. Starboard side of "Mascot," near stern, showing spindle which helps to draw main part of net up out of the water. Some of the crew are freeing slight tangle in net. They usually wear yellow rubber coats and overpants. CIA-132781

- 2 -

20. Two rowboats working to keep the net free. In the background another fishing boat is being held by its partner-boat. CIA-132782
21. The net is drawn in closer. CIA-132783
22. A boat beginning to lay net. CIA-132784
23. Sunny area in the overcast weather. At extreme left is our partner boat tugging at us. Further back is boat that has cast perhaps a third of its net. CIA-132785
24. Holding up the edge of the net close to the main boat. Probably most of the fish in the dingy are ones snubbed by the net, and therefore floating on the water. CIA-132786
25. A moment of clear weather, showing coastline. CIA-132787
26. Cod trapped in what little of the net is left in the water. Pole is handle of the scoop-net used to lift them into boat. CIA-132788
27. Center of Kabelvaag. Note US truck. I find only three, possibly four, things in this picture that would differentiate it from a small town in New Hampshire: a) naturally the license plate and sign are in Norwegian - "Stort utvalg av dresser" - large selection of suits; b) the "sparker," chairs on runners, at the right; c) the high rubber boots which everyone wears, here in Oslo, too; d) the mullions of the second-floor windows, common wherever I've been in Norway. CIA-132789
28. A dock in Svolvær, taken from the next dock. CIA-132790
29. Looking out from Svolvær. CIA-132791
- 30.) Inner harbor at Svolvær. CIA-132793
- 31.) CIA-132792
32. Aboard D. S. Vesteraalen en route to Trondhjem, looking north just after we crossed the Arctic Circle. CIA-132794
33. A Cambridge student, also looking north. CIA-132795
34. Most of the tour group. NOT accessioned - no intel. value
35. Small boat headed north, evidently throwing out rubbish. CIA-132796